Hallo! My name is _____. I'm from Datadesk, University of Stellenbosch and we are busy with a study for the Department of Social Services and Poverty Alleviation. We are interviewing people in your area to gain a better understanding of households with members who receive grants from the government. Many of our questions will be about the people living in the household, more or less like the Census. I will also ask questions on expenses and income of members of the household. Everything you or someone else from the household is going to tell me will be confidential and your name will not be revealed. Your household was selected because according to our records, there is someone staying here who receives a grant from the government. Nothing you will tell us will have any negative effect on your grant – rather, your participation in this study may help to improve the system.

Tracing of beneficiary:

Box and whisker plot

THE BOX AND WHISKER PLOT

The figure below outlines a skeleton of a box and whisker plot (also called the box plot). The box comprises of the middle 50% of observations. Thus, the lower end of the box, in terms of the measure to which it refers, is the first quartile and the upper end is the third quartile. The line in the box is the median. The broken lines extend downwards to the lowest value in the distribution and upwards to the largest value excluding outliers, i.e. extreme values, which are separately indicated and labeled.

The box and whisker plot provides information about the shape of the distribution, since it raises the question of whether the median is closer to the one end of the box.

Appendix 5

Teenage pregnancy

Teenage pregnancy

Table A: Age of first pregnancy by age
(all women 18 years or older)

		Age in categories				Total
		18-22yrs	23-30yrs	31-40yrs	41yrs or older
Teenage pregnancy	Teenage pregnancy (<18yrs)	Count	69	72	95	189	425
		Column %	18.9%	13.8%	17.4%	14.7%	15.6%
	Not teenage pregnancy	Count	296	451	450	1095	2292
		Column %	81.1%	86.2%	82.6%	85.3%	84.4%
Total		Count	365	523	545	1284	2717
		Column %	100.0%	100.0%	100.0%	100.0%	100.0%

Should the age for teenage pregnancy be set at seventeen years or younger, it seems that in beneficiary households (Table A above):

- 19% of women 18 to 22 years had a pregnancy while they were teenagers compared to 14% of those 23 to 30 years, 17% of those 31 to 40 years and 15% of those 41 years or older (no statistical significant relationship between age and teenage pregnancy).
