This project was a collaborative venture that drew on contributions and advice from a range of experts. Jonathan Bradshaw, James Browne, Mike Brewer, Nick Gould, Paul Gregg, Susan Harkness, Stephen Machin, Lindsey Macmillan, Sandra McNally, John Parsons, Phil Rees and Holly Sutherland all contributed to working papers on which this report draws (see list in Appendix).

In addition, Stephen Alambritis, Paul Dornan, Richard Exell, Goretti Horgan, Peter Kelly, Mike Lewis, Colette Marshall, Laura Payne, Stephen Meek, Bob Reitemeier, Elaine Squires and Madeleine Tearse gave advice and support to the project as members of the advisory group and in many other ways.

Sue Middleton contributed both by helping conceptualise the project at its start and by commenting on drafts towards its completion.

Helen Barnard and Chris Goulden at JRF held all this together and therefore made it possible for a highly ambitious project to bear fruit.

I am grateful to all of these people, and to the many who contributed in regional feedback events, for the time and effort devoted to this worthwhile enterprise.
